Smuggling-Evils of High Duties. Happy is the country whose people are simple and frugal in their habits and whose public debt is not large enough to require the imposition of onerous burthens upon the tax payers. With war and extravagance come beavy burthens, inordinate salaries, speculation, corruption, frauds, and general depravity. This country has run a rapid course in this respect. It was plain to all that the high duties imposed upon foreign importations would lead to smuggling, and we are beginning to have developments that show that the art of smaggling has attained a degree of success very credit ole for the experience the followers of the profession have had. From the charges now brought against a number of persons in New York-which inculpate the second great dry goods house in that city-we can understand that the art has been carried on in a wholesale manner. The cases presented involve an aggregate of over two millions of

The prosecution in these cases, as in all others of the kind, will have difficulty in producing proof, and it is reasonable to assume that where fraud is established it is but a small part of that which has been successfully practiced. We are given to understand by a remark of Mr. CLAFLIN, of the house of CLAFLIN & Co., inculpated in the prosecutions, that smuggling of silks especially has been large. He said that it was impossible to compete in the sale of silks except by buying goods that could not be supposed to have paid full duties. This assertion of so great a merchant shows not only that the business is large, but that he has yielded to what he confesses to be a necessity, and bought just such goods as be describes. The bouse of CLAPLIN & Co. has borne a high reputation in New York, and has been considered the competitor of STEWART'S. We can see that a trade in such goods must embarrass the business of a class of merchants very much, and put them upon devious ways and short cuts for self-protection. The purchasing of smuggled goods is the first step towards a guilty traffic in them. We doubt not that many houses in New York have purchased such goods with the same belief that Mr. CLAFLIN has; and we are sure that every prominent house suspects every other one of undercutting prices by dealing in these goods. Mr. CLAFLIN has told the story. It is more than probable that prominent contemporaries of CLAFLIN & Co. have helped on the prosecution.

This story is not surprising. Large public debt and high customs duties demoralize trade, and make usages common that would under other circumstances be regarded as dishonorable. This nation is fairly upon the career of the most corrupt, and must resort to all the means for detection of fraud that prevail where it has grown out of the same causes which now exist here. Such means are themselves the fruitful source of corruption.

We have no hope that the morals of trade can be bettered under present Government impositions, while for general corruption and fraud, young as this nation is, it is not excelled by any other. We do not mean to except to import duties as an objectionable way of raising revenue for the support of Government. That is decidedly the test way for supporting the Federal Government. The internal revenue laws have been far worse in their demoralizing effects. The whole country has fallen under them. The whiskey frauds are innumerable, and illicit distilling has led to murder. Witness the arrests and homicides recently in Southwest Virginia. It is bad enough that the Government should be poisoning a single class of society on the outer boundaries of the Union. We should protect the interior by the abolition of the internal revenue system altogether.

Generals Sherman and Hampton. The critics have reproduced the following extract from General Sherman's book and sharply commented thereupon:

"Many of the people thought that this fire was deliberately planned and executed. This to not true. It was accidental, and, in my judgment, began with the cotton which General, Hampton's men had set fire to on leaving the city (whether by his orders or not is not material), which fire was partially subdued early in the day by our men, but in great variety when night came the bigh wind fanned it again into tull blaze, carried it against the frame houses, which caught like tinder, and soon spread beyond control. * * In my official report of this corflagration I distinctly charged it to General Wade Hampton, and confess I did so pointedly to shake the faith of his people in him, for he was, in my opinion, a braggart, and professed to be the special champion of South Carolina."-Sherman's Memoirs.

General Sherman acknowledges baving TON, putting in by way of plea a motive which he would seem to consider strong enough to justify a culumpy, on which point people will probably differ very widely from him. But in making this confession of having perpetrated a great wrong against General Harron he ichicte an insult upon him by expressing his opinion that he was a 75 BARRELS NEW No. 1 LABRADOR HERRINGS. " braggart." We suppose that among those who know General HAMPTON the opinion is that there is no man to whom that epithet is less applicable, and, according to Monteomery Blase, certainly General SHERMAN IS not the person to apply it to any one. He must feel himself protected by some other shield than the timidity of General Harryon, or he would not be so ready to stigmatize him in this manner. A just critic, no matter what his political opinions may be, cannot possibly fail to censure this act of General Eherman in giving an insult while making an apology for an injustifiable wrong.

The New Orleans Times discuss to face in receipt of twenty-one chests of faces GUNPOWDER and OULONG TEAN, ranging from good to cholest, which we are retailing at 50c., 75c. *1.

The New Orleans Times draws the following contrast between the two generals:

" Hampton's march in Maryland and Pennsylvania shows how he regarded the rights and property of enemies. Sherman's march to the sea is in marked contrast thereto. Towns sacked, houses burned, farmes de-Towns sacked, houses burned fames despoiled, property stoken, women outraged a broad, black track of desolution and ruin marked the route of Sherman from Chattanoga to the sea, and from Savannah to Raleigh."

It would seem that the SHERMANS are governed by strange ethics-not at all con-General Hampton reached the Senate officially General Hampton took occasion to conmunicate to that body his positive denial of the charge made against him. It may be true that the Senate was not, in parliamentary propriety, required to take any notice of General Hampron's letter, but curtainly Senator therman could not properly take and notice of it as he did. The New York Herald asks if Commodore VanderBilt is a "pauper," prompted to ask the question because the Commodore begs the city to give the gratuitous use of two piers to the New York Central railway, of which the Commodore is king. The heading to the paragraph is startling. Certainly, one could be hardly more so than " Commo. dore VANDERBILT a pauper." Yet it is just such an announcement as might be expected in these times; not, indeed, that it should be made of Commodore VANDERBILT particularly, but of any millionaire. The "shrinkage" in securities has been such that the transition from opulence to poverty should be no strange event. A very noted millionaire, recently dead, has left a fortune which has dwindled upon investigation to a quarter of a million. We can imagine to what a state of poverty his poor heirs are reduced.

The aspiring members of the haut ton of American society must receive a lively impulse from the telegram that a married American lady (Mrs. CHESSIBOROUGH) was the belle at Ascot on cup day, where the Prince of Wales and the nobility were assembled. It was the day of the contest between the French and English horses. The English carried the day among the horses and the Americans among the women. So'tis said.

Errors.-There were a good many errors n Saturday's Dispatch. We think it proper to correct a few of the worst:

In the report of Dr. Smith's address, Lord NUNBODDO" ought to have been Lord MonBoddo"; "Colonel J. P. Fitz" should have been "Colonel J. P. Firzge-RALD"; "Nine-pence and four pence, and hapenny," ought to have been, "Nine pence and four pence hopenny."

The following is a corrected sentence: "JAMES MORTON, the 'solid column,' of revolutionary fame; R. N. VENABLE; MAT-THEW LYLE; WILLIAM BERKELLY, Whose works and whose sons are with us; HENRY N., WILLIAM M., and HENRY E. WATKINS,"

In behalf of the printer, we state that the manuscript was very bad.

equal to that of the Rockbridge Alum. The chaiv-brate and healing waters are of very superior ex-cellence. Ample experience in the use of these waters has furly established their great curative properties. They have made many wonderful enres, and are most admirably adapted to the treat-ment of dyspensia, liver diseases, constination, scrofula, cryshelas, cutaneous diseases, neuralsia, rheumatism, diseases of the urinary and generative corress mainties peculiar to the tema e.sx. and style unsurp seed in the mountains of Virginia. As to the qualities of the waters and the high regard in which they are held by the "medical sayans" the reader is referred to the pampilet at Messrs. Purcell, Ladd & Co.'s, who are agents for the material each of he water and salts.

Among the great features of these Springs are the rheumatism, diseases of the urbary and generative organs, maiadies peculiar to the fema e sex, and general debility. There are few forms of chronic disease that would not either be en'irely cured or greatly benefited by their judicious use.
